

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Stanley Aronowitz is Distinguished Professor in Sociology at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York. His latest book is Taking it Big: C.Wright Mills and the Making of Political Intellectuals (Columbia University Press, 2012). He is the co-managing editor of Situations: Project of the Radical Imagination.

Christos Boukalas currently works as a teaching assistant in the Lancaster University Law School and is currently completing a monograph on U.S. counterterrorism policy. His publications range from analyses of counterterrorism legislation to the contemporary practices of the anarchist movement in his native Athens.

Richard Dienst is the author of The Bounds of Debt: Borrowing against the Common Good (Verso, 2011) and Still Life in Real Time: Theory after Television (Duke University Press, 1994). He teaches in the Department of English at Rutgers University.

Jeremy Matthew Glick is an Assistant Professor of Modern Drama and African Diaspora Literature in the English department at Hunter College. He is completing a book on Twentieth Century theatrical representations of the Haitian Revolution, entitled: Imitations I Can Use: Haitian Revolutionary Tragedy as History and Genre.

Michael J. Thompson is Associate Professor of Political Theory at William Paterson University. He is the Founding Editor of Logos: A Journal of Modern Society & Culture. His latest book, The Republican Reinvention of Radicalism is forthcoming from Columbia University Press.

Konstantinos Tsoukalas is Professor Emeritus in Sociology and Political Theory at The University of Athens. He has published over a dozen books, including: The Greek Tragedy (1969), Dependency and Reproduction (1975), Social Development and the State (1981), Sovereign Power as People and as Nation (1998), War and Peace After the 'End of History' (2006), and most recently, The Invention of Alterity.