ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The SITUATIONS Editorial Collective wishes to express its gratitude to Dennis Broe and Terri Ginsberg for co-editing this special issue on Global Cinema and moreover an appreciation to them for their diligence in compiling these essays as well as painstakingly editing and proofing all the articles. The issue is a very impressive array of essays from contemporary film scholars on subjects ranging from the role of the state in cinema production, encyclopedic and critical approaches to national cinema, questions concerning the role of film festivals and engaging new stakes in film theory. We look forward to the debates, polemics and extended research that this broad range of essays might elicit in the spirit of the radical imagination.

We would also like to thank Long Island University for its financial support towards the publication of this issue and particularly the Richard Conolly College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, including the Media Arts Department for professional support.

And finally a special thanks to Frances Archer for her acute and thorough proofreading of this issue.
